TATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY

Kennedy's Democratic Record IN PULASKI COUNTY

Everyone should be made acquainted with the conduct of Mr. H. C. Kennedy after his defeat six years ago in the race for Circuit Judge He went to Monticello after the primary, and had Cress to meet him at the home of Kennedy's brother, John, and there they conferred one whole Sunday afternoon, and planned to defeat Judge Bethurum. They tried to carry out the plan, but failed, and the whole story of his deception and treachery will be fully exposed during the coming campaign for Circuit Judge. The same Kennedy following closely on the heels of his bolt in 1915 bolted and made speeches for the Democratic ticket in Pulaski county, in the year 1917. He will not attempt to deny this, as this is one time he openly fought a Republican ticket. In order that the minds of the voters may be refreshed on what he did that year, an editorial that was published in the Somerset Journal, the Democratic organ of Pulaski county, September 28, 1917, is herewith copied. It is as follows:

"The speaking at the court house last Saturday in behalf of the Democratic ticket by Judge Kennedy and was well attended. In fact the Court house was overflowing, numbers leaving because they could not secure seats. The speeches of these gentlemen were to the point, sledge hammer blows were struck, a spade was called a spade, no one being left in the dark as to their attitude toward the Democratic ticket."

After speaking all over Pulaski county that year for the Democratic ticket, this same Kennedy went to Sloan's Valley, some 15 miles south of Somerset, on the day of the November election of that year, and acted as precinct worker for the Democratic ticket. He was seen there by Dr. Thomas Ralston and Mr. R. H. Halcomb, of Burnside, Ky., who tell the story of his conduct in the following

"The undersigned state that they were on the election grounds at Sloan's Valley precinct, Pulaski, county, at the general November election, 1917, at which general election the county officials were elected, and also the magistrates. "They further state that H. . C. Kennedy was present at the polls at said precinct in said election, was there as a precinct worker for the straight Democratic ticket, and worked for said ticket, and fought the Republicans till noon on said election day. (Signed)

"Dr. Thomas Ralston, "R. H. Halcomb."

In a letter written by the said Ken-nedy to a prominent Republican in Rockcastle county, Sept. 17th, 1920, he admitted that he bolted the Pulaski county Republican ticket in 1917, in the following language:

"What I did in Pulaski county in some of the local races in 1917, is no secret. When I go on the stump there will be no denial."

This same Kennedy on October 22nd, 1917, signed an article, and had copies of it published and scattered throughout Pulaski county appealing to the Republicans of the county to follow him into the Democratic party, and vote the straight Democratic ticket that year. A copy of this circular is in existence. It is too long to copy in full, but a portion of it is here copied for the information of the voters. It is as follows:

'In our opinion there is but one remedy for Pulaski county, and that is for a while to turn its affairs over to the Democrats. . They have nominated some clean, hon-est, capable men for the county offices, and their election would mean the redemption of Pulaski county."

The voters responded to this appeal, but not to Kennedy's liking. They elected the straight Republican ticket from top to bottom, the majorities ranging anywhere from 239 to 2234, practically all the candidates that he fought winning by something like a thousand majority each.

We note in the Pulaski Republican of June 10th, the statement that the Mt. Vernon Signal is owned by Judge B. J. Bethurum and some of his friends at Mt Vernon and controlled by one of his friends This statement is incorrect While we are proud to be called controlled solely by Mrs. Annie E Miller. This paper is advocating Judge Bethurum's candidacy for Circuit Judge because we personally know, respect and admire him as a gentleman and as an officer. We stand for the best interest of our county, and believe that the interest of our county will be best served by his re election.

Judge Bethurm has made us a conscientious, capable Circuit Judge, he belongs by birth to Rockcastle County, and has at heart the interest of our people; he is a true and loyal Republican and we most respectfully insist that this paper has a perfect right to exercise the privilege of supporting him whole heartedly and earnestly, which privilege we intend to exercise, regardless of Mr. Kennedy's criticism.

THE CLARK FAMILY

Is traceable through the history of Kentucky since many years before she was admitted as a State. Colonel George Rogers Clark came to Kentucky in 1775 to help establish some form of civilization. He returned to Virginia and in an appeal to the Legislature of that State, had the territory now the state of Kentucky cut from Fincastle Co. Va., in 1776, and in 1779 built the first permanent fort at the Falls of Ohio, where Louisville is located. During his I fe he was one of the most noted Indian fighters and reduced many British forts in the northwest. From the settlement at Louisville came one Wallace Clark and located on Brush Creek, in this county, where his son, Talt Clark was born, in 1827. This was when Rockcastle had been a county only 13 years. Talt Clark, who is well remembered, lived and died on Brush Creek. He married Celia Laswell, wno died only last year at the home of her youngest son, Dave, who now lives at the old homestead on Brush Creek. The Clark family, like many others of this county, originally came from Virginia, and are related to George Rogers Clark, and to James Clark, who resided in Clark county and was elected Governor of the State in the year 1836. Ic the year 1830, when Uncle Talt Clark was 7 years old, the population of Mt Vernon was 142, and in the year 1848 he cast his first vote At that time there was less than 800 voters in this county. He voted the Republican ticket the first time its candidates appeared on the ballot and until his death in 1965 he voted and worked for the nominees of this party. The Clarks have stayed in this county; there are now 26 families of Clarks in this county, comprising more than 50 votes. They are loyal Republicans, have been good citizens, consistently paid their taxes, worked the roads, and been considered factors for good ever since the county has existed. They are the same family of Clarks who helped drive the Britons and savage Indians from our fair State and make it a safe place in which to live. The Clarks of this county have been content with a place to till the soil, work on the railroal or in the log woods. They have been true to their friends, and not vindictive toward any one with whom they chanced to disagree. They have very seldom asked for office; none of them has ever held a county office. They are a quiet unassuming family of people; there is no reason why any of them should here any bitter enemies in this county. Dave is asking for the Sheriff's office this year; people are convinced that it is Dave's time; he is running the race at the solicitation of more voters than any man who ever entered a race in this county. He is so strong in his home district that he will receive at least nine-tenths of all Republican votes cast there on August 6th. The people of this county believe in D. G. Clark. They know he is honest, courageous and well qualified to fill the office of Sheriff. The indications are he will carry every precinct in the county.

His deputies are very popular. No man çan attack the record of J. W. Mink as a good citizen and honorable, law abiding Christian gentleman. W. W. Anglin has been tried and found to be honorable, fair and a good Deputy Sheriff. He has courteously collected taxes, promptly served papers, and given general satisfaction in this

When these men take charge of the Sheriff's office, the masses of people will be satisfied that their business with this office will be promptly and rightly attended to.

ing after it, and then he walked across to his own car. With his mind still full of the interview he drove slowly along Piccadilly, while every now and then he smiled grinaly to himself. Was the whole thing an elaborate hoax? Somehow deep down in his mind, he wondered whether it was a jokewhether, by some freak of fate, he had stumbled on one of those strange mysteries which up to date he had regarded as existing only in the realms of

He turned into his rooms, and stood in front of the mantelplece taking off his gloves. It was as he was about to lay them down on the table that an envelope caught his eye, addressed to him in an unknown handwriting. Mechanically he picked it up and opened it. Inside was a single half-sheet of notepaper, on which a few lines had been written in a small, neat hand.

"There are more things in heaven and earth, young man, than a capability for eating steak and onions, and a desire for adventure. I imagine that you possess both: and they are useful assets in the second locality mentioned by the poet. In heaven, however, one never knows-especially with regard to the onions. Be careful."

Drummond stood motionless for a moment, with narrowed eyes. Then he leaned forward and pressed the "Who brought this note, James?" he said quietly, as his servant came into "A small boy, sir. Said I was to be sure and see you got it most particular." He unlocked a cupboard near the window and produced a tantalus. "Whisky, sir, or cock: ail?"

"Whisky, I think, James." Hugh carefully folded the sheet of paper and placed it in his pocket. And his face as he took the drink from his man would have left no doubt in an onlooker's mind as to why, in the past, he had earned the name of "Bull-Dog"

"I almost think, James, that I could toy with another kidney." Drummond looked across the table at his servant, tho was carefully arranging two or three dozen letters in groups. "I've got a journey in front of me today, and I require a large breakfast." James Denny supplied the deficiency from a dish that was standing on an electric heater.

Dialectical arguments did not appeal "By car," answered Drummond. "Pajamas and a tooth-brush." "You won't take evening clothes, sir?"

"No. I want my visit to appear unabout completely encased in boiled shirts, while pretending to be merely out for the afternoon, people have doubts as to one's intellect."

James digested this great thought in

"Will you be going far, sir?" he asked at length, pouring out a second cup of coffee. "To Godalming. A charming spot,

I believe, though I've never been there. Charming inhabitants, too, James. The lady I met yesterday at the Carlton lives at Godalming."

"Indeed, sir," murmured James noncommittally.

"You d-d old humbug," laughed Drummond, "you know you're itching to know all about it. I had a very long and interesting talk with her, and one of two things emerges quite clearly from our conversation. James, I am a congenital idiot, and den't know enough to come in out of the rain; or we've hit the goods. That is what I propose to find out by my little excursion. Either our legs, my friend, are being pulled till they will never resume their normal shape; or that advertisement has succeeded beyond our wildest dreams."

"There are a lot more answers in this morning, sir." Denny made a movement toward the letters he had been sorting. "One from a dovely widow with two children."

"Lovely," cried Drummond, "How forward of her!" Hie glanced at the or and smiled. "Care, James, and accuracy are essential in a secretary. The misguided woman calls herself lonely, not lovely. She will remain so, as far as I am concerned, until the other matter is settled,"

"Will it take long, sir, do you

"Personally, sir, I prefer a picturepalace. But I suppose there ain't no accounting for 'obbies. May I clear

"No, James, not at present. Keep quite still while I go on, or I shall get it wrong. Three months ago there arrived at The Elms, the most dangerous man in England-the IT of ITS. This gentleman goes by the name of Peterson, and he owns a daughter. From what Miss Benton said, I have doubts about that daughter. James." He rose and strolled over to the window. "Grave doubts. However, to return to the point, it appears that come unpleasing conspiracy is being launched by IT, the IT of ITS, and the doubtful daughter, into which Papa Benton has been unwillingly drawn. As far as I can make out, the suggestion is that I should unravel the tangled skein of crime and extricate papa."

"I fear, James, that you are not in the habit of spending your spare time at the British museum, as I hoped," said Drummond. "And your brain doesn't work very quickly. The point is not whether this hideous affair is better than Red Indians and things-but whether it's genuine. Am I to battle with murderers, or shall I find a house party roaring with laughter on the lawn?"

"As long as you laughs like 'ell yourself, sir, I don't see as 'ow it makes much odds," answered James. "The first sensible remark you've made this morning," said his master hopefully. "I will go prepared to

If by any chance you hear from me for three days, get in touch with Scotland Yard, and tell 'em where I've gone. That covers everything if it's genuine.
